For James Pease · trial version

Your first real session.

The trial version runs a real session with a real head, without logins. Everything you enter stays on your laptop, and everything they enter stays on their device until they send it to you. Open it at sccu-leadership-pillars.vercel.app/trial

Before the session

1. Set it up. Open the trial on the laptop you will run the session on. Type the head's name. It stays in your browser.
2. Send their link. Press Copy the link and send it to them with the message below. Give them a day or two.
3. Score them yourself. Six pillars, one dated example each. About ten minutes. Then press Lock my scores.
4. Open the link they send back. Same laptop, same browser. Their scores load and stay hidden until the reveal.

In the room, about 20 to 30 minutes

1. Say what it is. "This is where you were this month. It isn't who you are."
2. Reveal both sets. Turn the screen so you can both see it.
3. Take the biggest gap first. They talk first. Ask "What happened that puts you there?" Then give your example.
4. Agree a score for each pillar. Never the average.
5. One focus, one assignment, one date.
6. Save the summary as a PDF and send them a copy. Then press Download a backup.

A MESSAGE YOU CAN SEND WITH THE LINK

"I'd like to try something new in our next 1-1. Before we meet, score yourself on six leadership pillars using this link. It takes about ten minutes, and each score needs one real example from this month. I'm scoring you too, and neither of us sees the other's numbers until we sit down together. It's there to start a good conversation. When you finish, it gives you a link to send back to me."

If they disagree, or go quiet

- Go back to the two examples. "Tell me more about that day." The examples settle it, not the numbers.
- They may be right. If their example changes your mind, say so and agree the higher number. That builds more trust than holding your line.
- If you still see it differently, say so out loud. Agree a number for this month only, and make that pillar the first thing you look at next time.
- Keep it to one month. A hard month drops a score and a good month brings it back. A one-point difference is not worth a long debate.

GOOD TO KNOW

It lives on one laptop

Use the same laptop and the same browser throughout. Don't clear your browsing data. Download a backup when you finish.

Hidden by design, not locked

Their scores stay off your screen until the reveal. The trial relies on both of you playing it straight. Logins come with the full version.

They can change their mind

If they want to fix something after sending, they can. They send a new link and you open it before the reveal.

Afterwards, tell Callum three things

- Did the reveal start a real conversation?
- Where did you get stuck, or have to guess?
- What did they say about it afterwards?
